Tamara is a partner with expertise in complex business litigation, family law, and estate disputes. She has litigated numerous cases in British Columbia, California, Washington, and the U.S. Federal Courts. Tamara honed her skills at highly respected litigation firms in Los Angeles where she was named a Super Lawyers-Rising Star ranked in the top 2% of all lawyers in California under the age of 40. She has consistently been listed as a leading litigation lawyer through client and peer rankings.

Family and Estates Litigation

Tamara is the leader of Hamilton Duncan's family law group. She successfully resolves family disputes involving child and spousal support, cohabitation (pre-nuptial) and separation agreements, property division, protecting business interests, relocation, custody issues, parenting issues in divorce, and separation matters.

In estate and trust litigation disputes, her practice focuses on wills variation, inheritance disputes, undue influence and incapacity claims, unjust enrichment, committee applications and elder law.

Tamara's corporate litigation experience is a significant asset for her family and estate clients, particularly in cases that involve complex financial dealings, family-owned businesses, foreign assets, and high net worth family disputes.

She handles these cases in a compassionate and understanding manner for her clients while being a strategic and assertive advocate for them in negotiations and in the courtroom. She excels at providing creative and practical solutions to these difficult and emotional cases.

Commercial and Employment Litigation

Tamara has significant experience in complex commercial and employment litigation. With expertise in employment law and human rights matters, Tamara regularly advises clients on employment, wrongful dismissal, discrimination, severance packages, workplace investigations, policies, and HR management.

She has taught employment and labour law to government officials, lawyers, and corporate executives. Tamara has also represented movie studios, technology companies, actors and newspapers in contract negotiations and breach of contract disputes, trademark litigation, copyright litigation, licensing disputes and related intellectual property litigation.

Ms. Dewar has written extensively on litigation matters and she has given numerous seminars on employment law and family law, as well as lectures on business/intellectual property matters and litigation strategy.

While not practicing law, Tamara is an avid surfer, kayaker, and enjoys all outdoor activities. She has travelled extensively around the world and studied in Europe and Japan.
